SELECTED TALES.

A TALE OF THE REVOLTUION.

(Concluded)

Having satisfied himself after half an hour's ramble among the tents, of the danger to procure any further information, and aware of the importance of immediately conveying to the American General the intelligence which he had received, he cautiously but boldly left the camp in a different direction from that by which he had entered it. He met with no detention until accosted by the picquet guard,

'Who goes there?'

'A friend.'

'The countersign.'

'Success.'

'Whither bound?'

'For the camp of the rebels in quest of intelligence. I shall be prepared with a disguise, and if I escape detection, I shall return to General Burgoyne before the dawn of to-morrow. Should I not return, you will know my fate.'

'Go then, and may God and your King protect you.'

He reached his anxious comrades in safety, and was soon in the presence of his General, with whom he had a conference of a few minutes; when confidential messages were immediately prepared for a desperate struggle. Wilber having changed his dress, was made bearer of these despatches to the several commanding officers of the regiment and company to which he was attached, he was not backward to execute.

Just before dawn, a soft voice whispered in the ear of Henry Elverton, as he was lying on his musket—'Courage, Henry, we shall meet again.' Before Henry could recover his surprise, the mysterious speaker had disappeared—and the drum beat loudly to arms.

It is unnecessary to repeat the bloody scenes of that eventful—that glorious day—the pages of history record them in letters which will never be effaced.

Immediately after the battle, General Gates' first inquiry was for the gallant youth whose deed of daring had contributed so much to the success of the American arms. But he was not to be found. It was ascertained however, from Elverton, by whose side Wilber fought, that he had left the field a few minutes before the close of the action, in consequence of having received a severe bayonet wound in the right hand. His last words to Elverton as he left the ranks were, 'Courage, we may meet again. All search for the young hero proved fruitless.

On the evening of the 14th of October, a wounded soldier presented himself at the farm house of Isaac Wharton, and asked accommodations for the night. He bore the impression of extreme fatigue, and was readily admitted. After having partaken of a homely meal, with which he seemed much refreshed, he recounted the principal incidents which attended the battle of Saratoga, and spoke with almost supernatural eloquence of its glorious termination.

After a moment's pause—'Stranger,' inquired the worthy host, did you chance to meet a young soldier in the army by the name of Elverton?'

'I did,' said Wilber, and bravely did he acquit himself. I received this wound in my hand while fighting by his side. He escaped uninjured—

'Thank heaven for his safety,' exclaimed the patriot, 'but he little dreams what sorrow is in store for him. I fear that he will never again embrace his beautiful bride, or see his only daughter.'

Wilber could no longer——

'Father, mother, forgive—FORGIVE YOUR DAUGHTER!' And in the next moment Emeline Wharton was in the arms of her mother!

Let those who can imagine what cannot be described, picture the scene which followed this revelation.

On the surrender of Burgoyne, about five days after the general battle, Elverton and his father were discharged, and reached home on the very day following the incident. After an affectionate welcome by his mother, Henry's first question was,

'How is Emeline?'

Sobs and tears deprived her of utterance—Henry forgot the laurels his bravery had won—even patriotism itself was forgotten, as he hung in painful suspense over his weeping and almost fainting mother. Though his mind was on the rack to know the fate of Emeline, he refrained from asking any questions until she should become composed. At this moment a sweet voice from the outer door fell upon his ear—'Henry, we have met again!' The voice was familiar—he had heard it in battle—springing to the door to welcome the brave Wilber, he exclaimed—EMELINE WHARTON! It was a long time before he could be persuaded that the gallant soldier who so valiently fought by his side at Saratoga, was the betrothed of his bosom!

About three years afterwards a genteel looking stranger, accompanied by a single servant, halted before a neat little cottage in Berkshire county, Massachusetts, in front of which sat a sturdy yeoman, lolling to sleep by humming 'Yankee Doodle,' a restless little lad of some two or three years of age.

'My friend,' inquired the stranger, 'will you be so kind as to furnish us with a glass of water? our horses too need refreshment—you shall be rewarded.'

The farmer cast a scrutinizing glance at the stranger—

'General! I am already rewarded! If you will deign to enter my humble cottage.'

Further utterance was impossible—he thought of former scenes, and rushing from the presence of the distinguished stranger, he sought his young wife and whispered—

'An old friend wishes to see you.'

Observing an unusual flush in the countenance of her husband, she anxiously inquired, 'Who is it?'

'I will show you,' said he—'come with me!'

In the meantime the stranger dismounted, and without ceremony, entered the cottage, anxious to know by whom he could have been recognized.

He was met at the door by Henry Elverton, leading with one arm the blushing Emeline, and bearing on the other their only pledge of youthful love.

'Gen. Gates,' said Henry, 'do you remember Robert Wilber?'

'I do,' said the General, interrupting him—where is he?'

She is here! returned Henry, pointing to Emeline.

'Thanks be to heaven for the discovery, exclaimed the veteran hero, as he grasped the hand of the soldier's bride, and kissed the little one which was nestling uneasily in the arms of its father. 'Receive the blessing of an old soldier, who will never forget The Heroine of Saratoga.

A gentleman in England many years ago, employed an honest tar, who had quit the sea as a gardner. Jack had hardly entered his new service, when he found himself much annoyed by a dog that nightly invaded his premises. One morning the sailor got into the garden before the dog had escaped, and made him captive. As soon as he was seized, Jack deliberately took his spade, cut off his tail, and set him at liberty. Shortly after the gentleman entered the garden, and inquired of the gardner if the dog continued his annoyance? 'He'll never trouble us again,' replied Jack—'I caught him this morning, unshipped his rudder, and set him off before the wind, and hang me if he will be able to steer his way back,'

THE SUB-MARINE ARMOR CO.

OR, PUMP—PUMP—PUMP!

By the Author of 'The Old Clock:—Here She Goes—There She Goes.'

Every one who passes through S—— street as soon as goes by the residence of old Mr. G——, without looking up at the parlor windows, for at one of them the old rich, gouty fellow usually sits for hours, 'the observed of all observers.' There are many too, among the dashing young men of the city, who look up at those windows in hopes not to see him, but to see another—a charming girl named Charlotte—his ward!

Charlotte is a perfectly fascinating creature—elegantly accomplished. Her money, in some men's eyes, however, has glistened more than her other charms. The old gentleman, however, knows a thing or two, and though hard of hearing and not very nimble, even when nimbleness would be a virtue, yet he has gained the reputation of being as good a guardian as any that ever figured in a novel or play. Rich as Crœsus himself, he takes good care that his ward be anchore of her treasures, so long as he has an eye to watch, a tongue to caution, or a foot to kick a fellow into the street. If there be any thing that Mr. G——, however, particularly prides himself upon, where he should least do so, it is upon his knowledge of stocks—and many a call does he have from the getters up of 'fancies,' in the hope that he may become a purchaser We are afraid to say more, lest we should draw a portrait, where an outline sketch is only intended—and so enough.

Thus much we might have said just one week ago, as a few knowing ones about town can declare—but exactly thus we ought not to say to-day. The why will not be seen in the sequel.

Betty is the duenna of Mr. G——'s, and female after the heart of the old man—a confident, a housekeeper of the rarest qualities—in her character precise and rigid On Monday morning last, she opened the door to as nice a little man as ever crossed its threshold—young, blooming and handsome—a very pattern of a lover. His name—Charles Gerald. He had seen Charlotte from a window in a neighboring house—he had talked with his fingers till they ached—he had looked love with his eyes till they had watered—and so had Charlotte done the same, by which communications the fond lover had discovered that there was nothing to be gained except by a desperate act, for on his proposing to write a billet-doux, the reply was that he would have to bring it himself, and that then all might be discovered. Charles had anticipated as much. So he had determined to push a plot forward on the very morning already named.

He was shown into the parlor, where the old man was seated. and as he entered, the folds of a petticoat floated through a closing door.

'Good morning, Mr. G——. I have the honor to introduce myself to you as Mr. Gerald.'

'Good morning,' answered the old man dryly—'take a seat Your business with me?'

'My business—yes sir; my business, yes sir, is'——

'Is what?' piped the old man.

'Yes, sir.'

'Well, sir.'

'Well!'

'Well, I wish to introduce to your notice, Mr. G——, an invention of immense commercial importance, which is now under the control of a company:'

'What is it, sir?'

'It is, sir'——

'What—what is it?'

'It is the Sub-Marine Armor!'

'Sub-what? It sounds too much like Sub Treasury. What! Is it an armor of defence against the monster?'

'No, sir. It is more like a monster itself!'

'Well, well,' said the old man, 'there are so many monsters now-a-days, that mere trifles, by and by, will be the greatest monsters.'

'The purpose of this invention,' said Edward, 'is to go down to the bottom of the sea, and recover lost property—to visit sunken vessels, &c.'

'Ah—ah—! I remember—it was puffed in the newspapers, long ago,' said the old man.

'Yes, sir, it was noticed,' said Edward. I wish you would look at it, sir, and give your opinion upon it, and perhaps you will——'

'Well, young man, I have no objection,' said Mr. G——, 'but the weather is too cold for me to go out now—I——'

'Oh, Mr. G——,' interrupted Edward, 'it can be brought here, if you have no objection.'

'Of course I have not,' said Mr. G——. 'Curiosity alone, would prompt me to look at it?'

Edward's eyes brightened. The consummation of his hopes seemed at hand. 'I will bring it up this afternoon,' he replied; and thus having settled the matter, with a few courteous remarks, he bade the old man good morning.

It was Monday afternoon. A carriage, with the windows curtained, was watched by thousands, as it rolled along from Wall street up to S—— street. When it arrived before the door of Mr. G——'s house, the driver reined in his ill matched horses, and Charles Gerald quickly came forth from it, and ascending the steps of Mr. G——'s house, pulled at the bell. Betty opened the door. It was all right. Charles rushed to the carriage.

'Come, get out Major!' said Charles, hastily.

'I can't breathe, Charley. Curse me if I can.'

'Breathe if you can, for heaven's sake,' said Charles.

'That's what I want to do,' replied the Major, 'but I can't. Pump in some more air—pump—pump—pump, or I shall die!'

Charles sprung to the air pump, and having pumped in a fresh supply of the atmospheric, the major breathed once more freely, and announced himself ready to go ahead.

The pair prepared to ascend the steps, and the carriage driver bore in his arms the air pump and large coils of the air and conversation pipes.

'Heaven preserve us!' exclaimed Betty, as she stood in utter amazement at the scene. The brass bound, iron bound, iron cramped major, made the best of his way into the hall, while Charles gave directions to the driver to wait their return.

The two sparks were shown into the parlor. 'Pump, for heaven's sake!' cried the man in the armor, and away went the air pump like a steam engine.

Mr G—— entered. There stood the man in armor by the side of the centre table. Who or what he was could not be discerned by his appearance. He was, apparently, one mass of leather and rivets from head to foot; save that a plate of thick glass concealed his face so entirely that nothing but the protuberant nose could be discerned in the light which forced its way through the crystal medium.

'Ah—this is the—' said Mr. G——.

'Yes, sir; this is the—'

'Pump—pump!' cried the armor.

'What is that?' asked the old man.

'That—that—'said Charles, 'that is the—

'Pump—pump!' screamed the major, at the top of his voice.

Charles explained to the old man, while he forced in the atmospheric again.

'Then there's a man in there?' said old G——.

'Oh, yes, sir—a porter who is hired to show the invention in a correct manner.'

The old man put on his spectacles and came nearer. 'Well,' said he, 'I declare it seems to me a very important invention. But can the man move with ease in the water? Can he see plainly?'

'O yes! Walk a little,' said Charles through the conversation pipe.

The Major staggered across the room as well as he could, but almost tumbled down.

'And you think the stock is inclined to—'

'Pump—pump!' interrupted the Major with his sepulchral voice.

'Pump!' said the old man, 'well, if he pumps as badly as some stocks, it will pump tome folks dry. But Mr. Gerald, you hink it will—'

'Pump! groaned the man in armor. Charles forced in some more atmospheric.

'Well, my stars!' exclaimed the old man, 'this is a curious affair. I think Charlotte will be pleased to see it.' He rang the bell. Betty appeared. 'Betty,' said he, 'call Charlotte. She looked with astonishment at the specimen before her, and vanished.

In a moment Charlotte entered. 'Ah,' said Mr. G——, 'here is a curiosity for you, Charlotte, Mr. Gerald.' The introduction, at the same time that it delighted, confused the lovers. Charlotte, scarcely able to restrain herself from laughter, inquired what the machines before her were.

'Pump!' ejaculated the Major.

'What: does it speak?' asked the girl. 'Is it a——.'

'Pump!'

'Pump, is it?' stammered Charlotte.

'Oh no!' said Charles, 'this is the pump—the air pump,' and he supplied the armor with breath again—'this is the—

'Pump!'

'Hold your jaw!' bawled Charles through the conversation pipe, while the old man took up the thread of narration, and explained the invention, after a fashion peculiarly his own.

'Now for the letter,' whispered Charles through the conversation pipe, and he carefully deposited in the mailed hand of the Major a billet doux. As Charles went on to explain, calling Charlotte's attention more particularly to the armor, he neglected the air pump, and the Major, thinking he might venture to be exhausted from his long confinement, began to express himself as any thing but at home. 'Pump—pump—or I shall die! Quick, pump—pump—pump—and pump,' he almost inaudibly exclaimed, while he sank upon the carpet apparently unable to bear his incarceration longer. Both the old man and Charles flew to the air pump, while Charlotte, in her attempt to support the sinking man, received the letter, which she quickly concealed in her bosom.

'That'll do. I'm better now!' cried the Major. 'I'm glad of it,' said the old man, 'I thought we should have to call the Coroner, and that would be bad for the newspapers—'

'Pump!'

'Yes they do pump with a vengrance!—They are always pumping and never dry.—They——'

'Pump!'

Charles let fly the atmospheric yet again, and Charlotte left the room in haste. Having read the note, she stole slyly out of the front door, having told Betty that she was going to her own room, and then deposited herself in the carriage, which was only observed by the lover at the window.

'It is all right,' whispered Charles through the pipe. 'Prepare to depart.'

The old man having expressed a favorable impression of the invention, requested Mr. Charles to call upon him on the morrow for a decision about the amount of shares that he would take, and assisted the enterprising young men to depart. He saw them to the door; but unlucky chance! as the Major passed over the threshold, his foot caught, and he was thrown headlong down the steps! The armor protected him, however; and hurrying to the carriage door, with the assistance of Charles, his cumbersome person concealed the affrighted Charlotte from the eyes of the guardian, and the successful trio drove off amid the cries of 'Pump—pump—pump!' to an accommodating clergyman, who made Charles and Charlotte one that very night, and that too, in the presence of the armor clad Major, and as we know, to the chagrin of Mr. G—— and the utter amazement of Betty. The whole affair has been amicably settled, but whether the old man has bought any stock, will be found on application at the office of the Sub-Marine Armor Co.

N. B. The author requests his brother dramatists to suspend any operations upon the incidents above narrated, as a farce is already prepared, which embraces all here told, and somewhat more.

A soldier boasted to Julius Cæsar of the many wounds he had received in his face. Cæsar, knowing him to be a coward, said to him, 'The next time you run away, you had better take care how you look behind you.'

'You twain shall be one flesh,' as the sausage maker said when he mixed up the pig and puppy hash.

WASHINGTON CITY.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 28, 1839

NEW MEMBERS OF THE 26TH CONGRESS.

Now for running and dodging. "Mrs R. how can you guess so well, and tell so many truths of people—strangers too, whose names you do not know, and whom you never saw before? Truly, it needs no conjurer to discern either a man's principles or his manners, when he is ashamed or afraid to show his face, or runs from his shadow. We shall have some good anecdotes to publish on this subject. We have seen but few of the new members, for want of the Congressional Register to find their residence.

Hon John H Brockway, of the House, is from CONNECTICUT. He is a young man, of common height, and light, very neat figure. His face is oval and full, but wan. His features are regular, and his eye is a keen, deep searching blue. His countenance bespeaks ardor and independence, and much of Roman firmness. His manners are at once liberal and manly.

Hon. Thomas W. Williams is a middle aged man, tall and stoutly built. His visage is round and full, with very handsome features, and mild, dark, full eye. His countenance is open and pleasing, and has much of the milk of human kindness. His manners are affable and easy, and his meaning, intelligent smile, denotes him to be of the old school.

Hon. Truman Smith also of Connecticut, is rather younger looking. He is a tall, stout, portly figure, with a corresponding soul, which may be seen peering through his fine blue eye. His face is round, full and fair, and his countenance is open and gay. Mr. S. like his colleague, is devoid of that fanatical wire which deform the human face into that of brutes. His manners are modest, kind and familiar. These are the only gentlemen we have had the pleasure to see of the representatives of Connecticut.

NEW YORK.

We have seen but three of the new members from this State—Hon. Messrs. Ely. Wagner and Morgan.

Hon. John Ely is a distant relative of the famous Dr. Ely, distinguished for his "Christian party in politics"—and more recently for his happy success in spreading his gospel in Missouri.

Mr. E. long a resident of New York, is a native of Connecticut, and was old enough to recollect the destruction of his father's house and property by the British—his father being one of the revolutionary heroes.

Though advanced in years, Mr. E. is a hale, fine looking man. His figure is tall, erect and commanding, and to the most perfect symmetry of shape, unites a countenance and features of what must once have been a rare specimen of manly beauty. His face is oval, and his fine large black eye retains all the fire and vigor of youth. His manners are plain and dignified.

Hon. Peter J Wagner. Mr. W is a true specimen of a genuine Knickerbocker, and those personal traits which distinguish the gentleman of New York from those of any other State. The lineaments of the face, size and manners are so peculiar, that they are readily distinguished from people of other States.

Mr. W. is a middle aged man, of good height, and a stout heavy figure. His face is round and plump—his forehead broad and square, with a strong brow, and a fine large black rolling eye. His complexion, in which the brown and the rose are mutually blended, gives it a richness peculiar both to ladies and gentlemen of N Y. Mr. W.'s countenance is mild and steady, and his manners are plain and familiar.

Hon. Christopher Morgan. Mr. M. is rather YOUNG looking, of good height and common size, with a round, well featured, pleasing face, and a dark blue or grey eye of much expression. His fine ample retreating forehead, and intelligent countenance, bespeaks him a man of mind and information. His manners are natural and friendly, and readers him a very pleasant companion.

Hon. Henry Williams. Mr. W. is the new member from Massachusetts, and quite a young man. He is uncommonly engaging, both as regards accomplishments and appearance. He is tall and finely formed, with an oval face of uncommon interest His full dark eye beams with human kindness, and his mild benevolent countenance has much sweetness of expression. His manners are bland and gentlemanly.

This gentleman is the only new member from Massachusetts. We believe Hon. Abbot Lawrence has been in Congress heretofore.

MAINE.

There are four new members from this State, of whom we have seen but one—Hon. Nathan Clifford

Mr. C. is a young man, of rare personal endowments. He is a majestic, commanding figure, being six feet at least, in height, and very stout. His face is of the best model—round, fair and manly, with a soft hazel eye. His countenance is placid, and his manners are free and easy.

MARYLAND.

There are three new members from this State, Messrs. Carroll Hillen and P. F Thomas Of those we have seen but one, Hon. P. F: Thomas. Mr. T. is a very young man to be in Congress. He is of common height, with a slender figure and good form. His face is of the Grecian mould, and complexion somewhat sallow. His features are regular and handsome, and his eye is one of the finest in nature—large and brilliant, of a dark grey. His countenance is mild and winning, and his manners are simple and pleasing.

VIRGINIA.

We cannot say how many new members are from this State. We saw four, Messrs. Lucas. Samuel. Holleman, and Botts.

Hon. William Lucas is a brother of Hon. Fielding Lucas, formerly a member of Congress for several years, and now Governor of Ioway Territory.

Mr. William Lucas has a strong resemblance to his brother, though more delicate in person. He is a young man, of good height, and very slender. His face is oval, with a large dark blue eye, and long black eye lashes, which flashes with great animation when he speaks, and adds much vivacity to his countenance. His manners have all the courtesy and refinement of a well bred gentleman.

Hon. George B. Samuel. M. S. is a young looking man, tall and stout. His face is oval and fair, with a fine set of features. His fine high forehead—his sparkling hazel eye—his pure benevolent countenance and insinuating manners, renders him one of the most agreeable and pleasant men in Congress.

Hon. Joel Holliman. Mr. H. hardly a middle aged man, is of common height and common size, with rather a foreign aspect. We challenged him for a "Deicher," but a humorous wag he parried the charge with great humor and pleasantry. His face is round and dark, rather comely features, and a lively black eye. His manners are easy and genteel, and with a pleasant open countenance of much vivacity.

Hon. F. E Rives. This gentleman is not a new member, but he is new to us. He is young looking, though his hair is touched with the frost of time. He is a true specimen in appearance of the genuine "Tuckyhoe." His face is round, and features handsome, with a large grey eye, of much intelligence. He is rather austere, and reminds one of the bird that sat upon the tree. "I care for nobody," &c. In his manners, Mr. R. has all the loftiness and undaunted dignity of the old school Virginians.

Hon. John M. Botts. We cannot do this gentleman justice, as we had but a moments interview with him—and lest we should misrepresent him, we shall 'leave it be' for the present.

CHRISTMAS.

Christmas came upon us this year quite unawares. We were looking out for it so far behind the time, that we intended to make an appeal to our honorable friends in this paper for a turkey for our Christmas dinner—but it will do New Year.

A friend of ours, however, who kept better count than we, sent us the amount, to whom we return our sincere thanks—but, such has been the severity of the weather, that we were compelled to deny ourself that luxury.

Meantime, we shall expect from our honorable friends not only a turkey but a ham, and they shall have our prayers in return,

A CARD

We beg leave to return our grateful thanks to those generous members of Congress who aided us on Saturday morning last, which was doubly enhanced by the severe snow storm which suddenly followed. for this act of well timed humanity, they must have slept the sounder that night, as an approving conscience must have imparted soft peace to their pillow. May kind heaven reward them. Apropos Uncle Andy, where was he? Waiting upon the ladies, no doubt, as usual—he has got to be such a gallant, that we can hardly get a sight of him either in church or Congress Hall.

ABOLITION PAPERS.

The members of Congress are sadly tormented with abolition papers, which pour in upon them like a torrent. The mails are loaded down with them—the boarding houses, and the two Congressional post offices are flooded with them. What folly! They are not even opened, but used in kindling fires, or trampled under foot, or sold as wrapping paper by the messengers.

We perceive it is a mere money getting scheme for certain calculations made by the editors. It is a great pity those who furnish the money, could not see the use it is put to.

THE NEW SPEAKER.

The election of Mr. Hunter seems to "astonish the natives." But then upon "second sober thoughts, all are pleased. Success to him. We hope he will appoint a good committee on our case and let's be off—the place is too cold.

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

The President's Message is the President's Message—whether good or not we cannot say, for we have not read it, and are no judge if we had. Let Joe see to it. We are going to bid for the printing.

NEW JERSEY.

Since the Union has cast out New Jersey, we hope she will never seek to come into it again, but form an independent republic like Texas, and declare war against the whole United States, and capture every one who travels through their State—see what they will do then! Shame! Shame!

The Richmond (Va.) Enquirer heads an article in his paper "THE NEW SPEAKER," and bestows much praise upon him, and says he is "a young man and a young member," and that "he is indebted to the extraordinary position of parties. And we presume Mr. Hunter is indebted to his talents for the distinction, Mr. R. says he wants "bone and sinew." Mr. Richey ought to be told of the reply of the Earl of Chatham to the noble lord (we cannot recollect the name just now,) who sneered at Earl Chatham's youth.

POETRY.

THE COTTAGE DOOR.

BY T. S. HEAVE Y, ESQ.

How sweet he rest that labor yields
The humble and the poor
Where sits the patriarch of the fields
Before his cottage door:
The lark is singing in the sky,
The swallow in the eaves.
And love is beaming in each eye
Beneath the summer leaves
The air amid his fragrant bowers
Supplies unpurchased health,
And hearts are bounding 'mid the flowers,
More dear to him than wealth.
Peace like the blessed sunlight plays
Around his humble cot
And happy nights and cheerful days
Divide his lowly lot,
And when the village Sabbath bell
Rings out upon the gale,
The father bows his head to toll
The music of its tale:—
A fresher verdure seems to fill
She fair and dewy sod,
And every infant tongue is still,
To hear the Word of God.
O'. happy hearts—To him who stills
The ravens when they cry,
And makes the lilly 'neath the hills
So glorious to the eye.
The trusting patriarch prays to bless
His labor with increase;
Such' ways are pays of pleasantnes,'
And all such 'paths are peace!'

As some young ladies were lately taking a walk they were accosted by a gipsey woman, who, for a very small reward very politely offered to show them their husband's faces in a pool of water the stood near. Such an offer was too good to be refused, and on paying the stipulated sum, the ladies hastened to the water, each in anxious expectation of getting a glimpse of the 'beloved object,' but lo! instead of beholding the form and face' they so fondly anticipated, they were surprised to see their own rosy cheeks and sparkling eyes glancing from below. 'Sure you are mistaken. 'I'm no man,' exclaimed one of them, for we see nothing but our own faces in the water. 'Very true, mem,' replied the sagacious fortune teller, 'but these will be your husbands' faces when youre married.'

VEGETABLE COUGH SYRUP.

For Colds, Whooping Cough, Pain and Soreness in the Breast, Influenza, Consumption, Hoarseness, Difficult Breathing, and Diseases of the Breast, and Lungs generally.

In presenting this useful remedy to the public, the proprietor wishes to state that his Syrup is composed of Irish moss, combined with such other articles as have been found best calculated to afford relief in the above named diseases.

This medicine has been used very extensively and the proprietor has not known a single instance in which it has failed giving relief in diseases for which it is recommended, even in cases approaching to consumption, attended with bleeding at the lungs, and when all other remedies had failed, the most decided and flattering success has attended its use. Common Colds, which are generally the effect of obstructed perspiration, will yield to its influence in a few hours: when used in Asthma, Hoarseness, Wheezing and shortness of breath, it gives immediate relief; in Whooping Cough it is without a rival. It operates by gentle expectoration, and may be given both to adults and infants with perfect safety

PASSAGE TO NORFOLK, PORTSMOUTH, PETERSBURG, AND RICHMOND.—THREE TIMES A WEEK.

The steamboats Alabama, Capt. Sutton, and Kentucky, Capt. Holmes, will commence to run three times a week, [alternately,] on Monday, the 4th of March next, leaving the lower end of Spear's wharf, Baltimore, every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday afternoon, at 3½ o'clock, and arrive at Portsmouth next morning in time for the cars to Wilmington; and thence in steamboats to Charleston, which is the quickest, cheapest, and most comfortable route.

These boats also run in conection with the James river boats for Petersburg and Richmond, where they arrive next afternoon from Baltimore. This is likewise by far the most pleasant route; having a comfortable night's rest, and no changes from steamboats, stages, and railroads, in the dead of night, as on the Washington route. The company having bought the new and beautiful steamboat Jewess for the purpose of running a daily line, due notice will be given thereof; and the company hope that travellers, will patronise this line assuring them that nothing shall be wanting on their part to give comfort and despatch.

INDIAN RESTORATIVE,

For Restoring and Promoting the Growth of Hair.

THIS article not only promotes the Growth of Hair, but makes it soft and pliable. It prevents its falling off, and affords effectual nourishment to the Roots, restores it to its natural color, improves the beauty, and gradually changes light or red hair, to that of a brown or black. It also removes Dandruff, prevents baldness, and so extremely pleasant to use, that parents will find it of great advantage in cleaning children's heads; (as it is of great benefit to the health,) and is far superior to all other Restoratives, Balsams or Oils—and particularly in cases of Fever, when the hair begins to fall off. There has never been any thing so effectual as the 'Indian Restorative.'

FOR

PUBLISHING BY SUBSCRIPTIONS

The Authentic Report of the Controversial Discussion, that took place in the City of Dublin, in the year 1827, between the Rev. THOMAS MAGUIRE, and the Rev R. T. P. POPE.

This celebrated work, the most remarkable controversal discussion of modern times, having gone through twenty-one editions in England and Ireland, where it is still read with extraordinary vidity, and in the United States passed through three editions, all of which are exhusted to the last copy; and the demand for it from all quarters, Catholic and Protestant, being still very great, it is proposed to re-publish it in Weekly Numbers at such a price as to put it within the reach of all without oppressing any.

Those in the City of N. York, who wish the work, will be served by leaving their names with the publisher, John Doyle, 294, Pearl Street, those at a distance can have it regularly mailed to them, by remitting one dollar in a post-paid letter.

Agents.—Mr. Patrick Conolly, 118 Ann St. Boston;—Henry Mc Keon, Willings Alley, Philadelphia;—Mr. John Farnon, Utica, N. Y.;—Mr. Mathew McLeod, Georgetown, D. C.;—Mr. Peter Haynes, Savannah, Geo.—and the office of the U. S. Catholic Miscellany, Charleston, S. C.

It is a well known fact that this great controversy has converted more sectaries to the Catholic Church in England and Ireland, than any other work whatever; and has also been the happy means of bringing great numbers to the true faith in the United States. It is therefore hoped that every sincere Catholic will lend his aid, by putting down his name, to prevent so valuable a work from being out of print, more particularly when for his subscription, he will receive the utmost value.

CONDITIONS.

1. One thousand copies only will be printed.

2. The paper and print will both be excellent.

3. It will be issued in weekly parts at twelve and a-half cents each part payable on delivery.

4. The number of parts it will make cannot be ascertained with accuracy at present, but should it exceed eight, the overplus will be given gratis.

FARE 2 dollars cheaper than any other line to Frederick or Wheeling.

The stage will leave Fredericktown daily on the arrival of the Western stages, and arrive at Washington in time to take all Southern routes. By this line the passengers will arrive at Winchester the same day.

The coaches and teams on this route are of the first quality, with skilful and attentive drivers, and the proprietor pledges himself that every attention and accommodation will be given to the passengers who give this line their patronage.

feb 19 JOHN BROWN, Proprietor.

AGENCY AT WASHINGTON.

JAMES H. CAUSTEN, (late of Baltimore having made this city his permanent residence and located his dwelling and office directly opposite to the Department of State, will undertake with his accustomed zeal and diligence the settlement of claims generally, and more particularly claims before Congress against the United States or the several departments thereof, and before any board of commissioners that may be raised for the adjustment of spoliation or other claims. He has now in charge the entire class arising out of French spoliations prior to the year 1800, with reference to which, in addition to a mass of documents and proofs in his possession, he has access to those in the archives of the Government.

Claimants and pensioners or the Navy fund, &c. bounty lands, return duties, &c. and those requiring life insurance, can have their business promptly attended to by letter, (post paid,) and thus relieve themselves from an expensive and inconvenient personal attendance.

Having obtained a commission of Notary Public, he is prepared to furnish legalized copies of any required public documents or other papers. He has been so long engaged in the duties of an agent, that it can only be necessary now to say that economy and prompt attention shall be extended to all business confided to his care; and that, to enable him to render his services and facilities more efficacious, he has become familiar with all the forms of office.

SHERWOOD'S ELECTRO MAGNETIC REMEDIES FOR CHRONIC DISEASES of the class of Hypetrophy, including the forms of Scrofula, viz: Tubercula Consumption, Dyspepsia, Chronic Disease of the Liver, of the Heart of the Spleen, of the Kidneys, of the Spine, White Swellings, Scrofulous Sore Eyes, Scald Head King' Evil, Leucorrhœa, Chlorosis, Menorrhagia or Females complaints.

These are but different modifications of the same disease, arising from the same cause, distinguished by the same diagnosis, and curable by the same remedies. Their common cause is an irregularity of the Electro-Galvanic forces in the system; they may all be detected by pressure upon the sides of the vertebræ and glands of the neck which elicits the Electro-Galvanic symptom, and easy may be cured by these Electro-magnetic remedies: The latter are accompanied by a comprehensive medical treatise, explaining the principles of the discovery upon which they are founded, only stating the manner in which they are to be applied. In this work Dr. Sherwood demonstrates the fact that every part of the human body, together with every particle of animate and inanimate matter is either in a negative or positive state of electricity, and that every motion, in all matter, whether in the largest masses or in the smallest particles, is produced by the attracting and repelling forces of this universal principle. The morbid action which produces disease of the organs or limbs, he proves to be occasioned by the undue preponderance of one of these forces in the system and his remedies restore health by subduing this irregular action to an equilibrium. By this means the very seeds of the disease are eradicated, and a permanent cure effected, even in cases where all hope of relief from other sources is abandoned. The Electro-Magnetic remedies are the only preparations applicable to this prevailing class of diseases and they never disappoint the confidence reposed in them. The symptoms of the class of diseases to which they are applicable can be discovered, under the directions contained in the work which accompanies them without the aid of a physician, and they can be used with perfect safety and success without dieting or inconvenience, or any other further advice than this work affords. J. F. CALLAN,

WASHINGTON,

Has just received a fresh supply of

Perfumery, Fancy Soaps and Cosmetics,

Manufactured by Johnson & Co. Wholesale Perfumers, (successors to Snyder & Co.) sign of the Civet Cat, corner of Cedar and William street New York.

Cold Cream.

This exquisite preparation will be found particularly efficacious in all cuticular irritation, and as an emollient, its soothing and cooling properties stand unrivalled. No pains have been spared to produce it of the rarest quality, from the purest of materials, and we confidently offer it as an article of first rate toilet standing, which if equalled, certainly cannot be surpassed by any composition whatever.

Florida Water.

A most delicious perfume and agreeable change from the Eau de Cologne, whose delicacy and potent fragrancy it rivals. From its retentive qualities, it will be found an economical and powerful distributor of sweets for handkerchiefs or linen.

Bears' Oil.

This preparation is recommended as possessing all the restorative qualities of the Bears' Grease, without the unpleasantness attending its use, and by the strength it acquires by concentration, a much less quantity will produce the same result It has also another property—that of purity, which however carefully Bears Grease may be prepared it cannot possess, indeed the Oil has so far superseded the use of the Grease by its superior cleanliness, that the latter is but in little or no demand. The Oil now offered has been clarified from all impurities in the most skilful manner, by a chemical process, and is rendered very agreeable by being highly scented with the pure Persian Otto of Rose

GRECIAN DYE,

For changing the Color of the Hair, from Red or Grey to a Brown or Black.

Directions for Use.—1st. Too great care cannot be taken to cleanse the hair from grease, as the dye will not take effect unless it be entirely removed. To do which, wash the hair in a solution of about a quarter of an ounce of pearl-ash to a quart of water, until it be perfectly clean; and, when it has become perfectly dry, is fitted to receive the preparation.

2d. To prevent the Dye from coloring the skin grease the part around the hair which may be liable to be touched with it.

3d. To apply the Dye, shake it well, so as to raise the settling at the bottom; then, (having a piece of sponge ready, tied to the end of a small stick, about an inch wide,) pass a small comb in a the roots of the hair to prevent the skin becoming discolored, pour a little into a cup or glass, comb the hair in one direction, dip your sponge into the dye, and rub it over the hair until it becomes quite wet; let it remain till dry; then comb the hair in an opposite direction; repeat it till brown, and so on till the hair becomes black. The application could be made, the person sitting in the sun, for the brighter the atmosphere, the finer the dye becomes. If applied at night, or in the damp, it will to have the desired effect.

4th. The day after the application of the dye wash the dye in a solution of salt. (Form it of one ounce of salt to one pint of rain water.) This will set the color, and give it brilliancy.

Lastly. To avoid soiling the Skin or Linen, brow a cloth over the shoulders, wear gloves to protect the hands, and should any of the liquid accidentally drop upon the skin, wipe it off immediately with a wet towel, and be careful not to take overmuch of the dye in the sponge at once. It may not be amiss to observe, that after the dye is set, washing the hair will rather improve than be any injury to it.

Honey Water.

As a wash for the hair, or for imparting a mild fragrancy to linen, this perfume possesses a delicacy which renders it peculiarly agreeable; in warm weather, from its revifying properties, it must always be considered as a neat and appropriate article for the toilet.

OTTAR GUL.

SPIRIT OF ROSES.

The perfume of the Rose has something so transcendently etherial, that it obtains in Persia, its native home, the name of Ottar or Soul: and the east of Roses, when these flowers break into bloom, is there celebrated with all that can be conceived of Eastern magnificence. To describe its qualities would be superfluous—sufficient it is to say, that the Spirit of "Roses" is inferior only to the genuine Persian Ottar, and indeed it approximates so closely as to be but with great difficulty distinguished. As a favorite with the fair, their own lovely type, it will ever stand unrivalled, and be cherished by them so long as taste and elegance shall remain.

Rose Water.

This is an article of universal repute, so much so, that it has even found its way into the mysteries of culinary skill, by which it is employed in imparting a flavor to conserves, &c. It behoves every one, therefore, to take particular care from whence they obtain it. Kimball and Co. pledge themselves that their Rose Water is a simple distillation from the queen of flowers, and that it is entirely free from any artificial compound; consequently, its native delicacy and fragrancy are not only preserved, but its use rendered innoxious as that of pure spring water.

Amboyna Lotion.

Next to cleanliness, (says the most celebrated dentist of the day,) I know nothing so conducive to the preservation of the Teeth and Gums, as the purifying the breath, as the Amboyna Lotion and I advise every one who sets a value upon their possession invariably to use it."

With such strong remarks upon its merits, it would be futile in the proprietors to add in praise one word of their own; they will therefore confine themselves to giving proper directions for its use.

The Teeth should be cleansed with a soft brush, and the Botanical Tooth Powder every morning, and the mouth and Gums rinsed with the Lotion; by attending to these simple directions, those who have good Teeth, will infallibly preserve them; those whose Teeth have a tendency to decay will have the comfort of discovering that the evil can proceed no further.
